1. Prime Minister Justin Trudeau’s Visit to the United States. Earlier this month, Canadian Prime Minister Justin Trudeau traveled to the United States for an official visit. During the visit, he and President Obama discussed several issues, including environment and global warming. Trudeau is a liberal. The previous Canadian prime minister was Stephen Harper, who as a conservative. The Canadian Liberal and Conservative parties (and the New Democratic Party: NDP) very loosely correspond to the two major US parties, Democratic Party and Republican Party (GOP). Use an internet search engine to answer the questions below.

   (a) On the issue of global warming, how does Trudeau’s stance differ from that of Harper?

   (b) On the same issue, how does Obama’s (or any of the hopefuls, Bernie Sanders and Hillary Clinton) stance differ from that of Bush (or any of the hopefuls, Ted Cruz, Donald Trump, Marco Rubio, and John Kasich).

   (c) Some referred to this visit as an “official visit,” while others referred to it as a “state visit.” What is the difference? Which one is technically correct in this case?

   (d) Many news outlets, including CBC, ABC News, New York Times, and National Post, used the word “bromance” to describe the relationship between President Obama and Prime Minister Trudeau. What does “bromance” mean?

